MEET THE BEEHLERS
JSU'S 12TH PRESIDENT AND FIRST LADY

DEAR ALUMNI AND FRIENDS,

Greetings from Bibb Graves Hall! I am honored to join the Gamecock family as 12th president of Jacksonville State University.

From the first moment I stepped foot on the JSU campus, I knew it was a special place. From its beautiful setting and friendly people to its excellent programs and strong traditions – JSU is truly a “GEM” for our state and nation.

It is a blessing and a privilege to serve you as your president. On page 4, you can learn more about my background and perspectives on higher education and the university. I look forward to working with you and the entire Gamecock family as we strive to bring JSU to even greater levels of excellence. Thank you for your continued support.

Go Gamecocks!

John M. Beehler, Ph.D., CPA
President

GREETINGS GAMECOCKS!

It is an exciting time here on campus as our new freshman class begin their journey as Gamecocks! We hope you will join us for our Halloween Homecoming on Saturday, October 31! The schedule of events is included on page 43.

I would like to thank those of you who completed our recent online survey. Your feedback is important to us. I want you to know that we heard you and are looking at ways to incorporate your ideas and suggestions.

We always want to hear from you! Let us know about all the amazing things that are happening in your life so we can share your successes. Thank you for all you do to promote JSU. I hope to hear from you soon.

Go Gamecocks!

Meet Dr. John Beehler

JSU's 12th President.....

BY BUFFY LOCKETTE

MAGICAL THINGS HAPPEN ON A COLLEGE CAMPUS. LIKE THE ROGUE SNOWBALL THAT CHANGED JOHN BEEHLER'S LIFE.

“One day, while I was walking across campus after a snowstorm, out of nowhere a snowball hit me in the chest,” Beehler said. “I looked up and there she was with a great big smile on her face. She got my attention and the rest is history.”

Beehler is now Dr. John Beehler, the new president of Jacksonville State University. The woman who threw the snowball – then a collegiate softball and basketball player – is now Dr. Pamela Beehler, JSU's new First Lady.

There's rarely snow on the campus of Jacksonville State, but Beehler says he feels at home here. A graduate of Penn State, he grew up in the foothills on the other side of the Appalachians. The first in his family to attend college, he feels a strong connection to what he calls the “soul” of JSU.

“To me, there is something very spiritual about JSU,” Beehler said. “It has a very important mission that is uplifting to all its constituents and will lead to the growth and development of the region and its citizens. Simply stated, the friendliness is deeply rooted in JSU's culture and reflects a loving, caring attitude in developing students for their future careers and life.”

4: GEM OF THE HILLS

Beehler took over the reins as 12th president of the university on July 1, following a nationwide search led by Atlanta-based firm Diversified Search. He follows Dr. William A. Meehan, who retired after 40 years of service to the university, 16 as its president, on June 30.

The new president comes to JSU with 34 years of higher education experience, 20 years in leadership roles. Most recently, he served as dean of the School that provided an ideal family environment. We were taught that everything was possible in America with hard work and faith. As the first born, it was expected that I would do well in school and extracurricular activities and would go to college. Since my parents never graduated from college, they wanted me to graduate and have the opportunities that they never had. I have always been very proud of my parents and never wanted to disappoint them. I felt a

I was born to be a university president,” Beehler said. “This type of encouragement put the idea in my mind and, thereafter, I proceeded to take on increasingly more responsible positions in academic administration to get the diverse experience in higher education needed to become a president. A key factor was the support and encouragement of my wife, Dr. Pamela Beehler, a career academic who has always believed in me.”

“My tagline is ‘It’s not all about me, it’s not all about you, it’s about all of us – the Jacksonville State University Gamecock Family.’” of Business at Robert Morris University in Pittsburgh. He previously served as founding provost and vice president for academic excellence and student success at the University of North Texas at Dallas, associate provost for economic initiatives and dean of the Haile/US Bank College of Business at Northern Kentucky University, dean of the W. Frank Barton School of Business at Wichita State University, and associate dean at the University of Texas at Arlington.

A certified public accountant, Beehler has significant experience in college and university accounting and auditing. He earned a Bachelor of Science in accounting from Penn State and an MBA in finance and a Ph.D. in accounting and taxation from Indiana University.

“I never imagined as a student that someday I would be university president,” said Beehler. “I grew up in a small town big responsibility to graduate from college and be successful.”

Upon earning his bachelor’s degree, Beehler landed a job at one of the world’s top accounting firms. To speed his climb up the corporate ladder, he decided to go back to college and pursue an MBA. He taught classes to pay for graduate school and, to his surprise, discovered a love for teaching. Instead of returning to the corporate world, he went on to earn a Ph.D. and launched a career in higher education.

More than 13 years and several teaching awards later, Beehler took on his first leadership role in academia when his peers at the University of Texas at Arlington elected him chair and president of the Faculty Senate. He had a talent for diplomacy, and one of his mentors took notice.

“After seeing me take on various leadership roles, one of my early mentors specifically told me that she thought

Beehler met the “love of his life,” the girl with great aim, while they were undergraduates at Penn State. The couple married shortly after graduation 38 years ago and the First Lady has had a successful academic career in her own right. She holds a Ph.D. in human performance from Indiana University and is an expert on brain performance and concussions. She spent her entire career as a tenured professor of kinesiology and exercise science, including eight years as a department chair. The couple has one daughter, Kristin, who is a West Point graduate and a captain in the U.S. Army with deployments in Iraq and Kuwait.

Becoming JSU president is a role Beehler has prepared himself for through experience and training. In 2011, he completed a yearlong program specifically designed for aspiring university presidents, the American Academic Leadership Institute’s Executive Leadership Academy. He is also a graduate of the Harvard Institutes of Higher Education Management Development Program.

Beehler comes to JSU with respect and admiration for its culture and traditions, as well as ideas for helping move the university forward in today’s challenging higher education market.

“Institutions like JSU must focus on students and mission and in some ways behave more like private institutions,” Beehler said. “That is, we must realize that enrollment, retention, progression and graduation rates are extremely important as well as securing private support to supplement the decreasing amount of state support. We must be strategic and develop key niches that differentiate us from our competition. We need to increase the use of technology to meet student needs and to be more efficient and effective in what we do.”

While Beehler came to JSU ready to lead on day one, it is not his style to attempt to make sweeping changes overnight. He plans to immerse himself in the university’s culture during his first year and gain a better understanding of its challenges and opportunities before making any major structural shifts. A servant leader with a collaborative nature, he wants to develop a collective vision for the university with the entire JSU family. No matter the road ahead, he wants to ensure JSU doesn’t lose sight of what makes it special.

“We should not change JSU’s friendliness and traditions of excellence,” Beehler said. “We should always strive to be the best in what we do. JSU should not lose sight of its focus on students and their development as educated, ethical, and responsible professionals, leaders and citizens. A focus on their development educationally, culturally, socially, physically and spiritually will always lead to better professionals, leaders and citizens. This, in turn, will benefit our region, state, country and the whole world.”

Just weeks into his new presidency, Beehler’s humble and low-maintenance attitude, respectful demeanor and positive energy was already putting the campus that hasn’t seen a leadership change in 16 years at ease. He gained admiration from employees and students alike when he moved into a residence hall instead of cooling his heels in a hotel suite while needed renovations are being made to the President’s House this fall.

“I am excited about serving JSU and our region,” Beehler said. “My tagline is ‘It’s not all about me, it’s not all about you, it’s about all of us – the Jacksonville State University Gamecock Family.’ I truly believe this and would hope that all of us would adopt this mantra and work for the betterment of all.”

JSU Alumnus Creates Masters

BY KATIE CLINE

JACKSONVILLE STATE UNIVERSITY DOESN'T JUST CREATE EXCELLENT ALUMNI, IT CREATES MASTERS. THROUGH THE MASTER OF FINE ARTS PROGRAM, ARTISTICALLY GIFTED STUDENTS ARE PREPARING FOR CREATIVE CAREERS – FROM ART DIRECTOR TO COLLEGE ART PROFESSOR – LED BY ONE OF JSU'S OWN ALUMNI, SETH JOHNSON.

Without JSU, Seth Johnson would never have been born. His parents met on campus in the 1970s, fell in love, and got married. When he was a senior in high school, the college he had heard about his whole life offered the promising young artist what every student wants: a full scholarship.

“I went all four years on a full art scholarship,” Johnson said, “and I loved it. JSU was the perfect size. Art departments can be too big in that they lack the individual attention. They can also be too big in that all the disciplines are separated, almost segregated. JSU was the perfect size. You got a lot of great attention from your faculty members.”

Johnson graduated from JSU in 1999 with a Bachelor of Fine Arts in graphic design. He went on to receive his MFA in graphic design from the University of Tennessee and has been nominated for three Emmy awards, including one for his work on the reality TV show “Brush Country.”

Along with his television and design work, Johnson secured a teaching position at Middle Tennessee State University. He had been at MTSU for 12 years when he got a call from one of his former professors informing him that JSU was in search of a new art department head. Excited at the prospect of working for the university that shaped his professional career, Johnson applied, interviewed, and was offered the job. So, in 2014 – 15 years after he graduated – Johnson returned to his alma mater where he now serves as a professor of graphic design and head of the art department.

“It still has that homey feel to it,” he said about JSU. “I wasn’t on campus two days, and I walked by the president and he immediately knew my name. It really was like coming home.”

In addition to teaching, Johnson works closely with JSU’s MFA program to help students reach their full potential.

Officially launched in 2011 after years of careful planning, JSU’s program is the only one in Alabama that focuses in visual communication design – a new and evolving industry where designers use technology, design and social awareness to solve problems that inform, educate and elicit responses from end users.

“Graphic design is typically solving a problem for a client,” Johnson explained. “It’s some form of visual communication. The term ‘graphic design’ was coined in 1929, but from 1929 to now a lot has changed. We’re not just making posters anymore. The more accurate term is ‘visual communication.’ It includes web design, motion graphics, television, broadcast, the Web and print media. To say it’s just graphic design is kind of limiting.”

The 60-hour MFA program integrates both research and studio components, assisting students in developing a professional portfolio by the completion of their degree. In just three years, students are qualified to teach at the university level or to advance in their specific field, such as web design or illustration.

“Our ideal student would be someone who was a graphic designer who wants a career change,” Johnson said of the MFA program’s targeted demographic. “They have professional experience. They might be in Atlanta, Birmingham or Chattanooga and they’re ready for a career change.”

Jamie Runnells, associate professor of graphic design and coordinator of the MFA program, said the program provides its students flexibility. “You could mix and match from all sorts of areas,” she said. “If you wanted to take a course in web design and motion type and the moving image and the history of photography, all of those things are valid, so you can really tailor the degree to your needs.”

The MFA is a terminal degree, meaning it is the highest degree one can pursue in fine arts. Therefore, graduates are qualified to become college art professors or even, like Johnson, department chairs. The program also prepares students for careers in advertising, marketing, entertainment and other industries.

“The types of careers that our students can pursue with an MFA from JSU would be obviously in design education, but also as an art director,” said Johnson. “With our vicinity being both close to Birmingham and Atlanta, there are numerous opportunities.”

Susan Cowan Robertson is one student who has taken advantage of JSU’s unique and individualized program to help further her career. She was the first graduate of the MFA program back on August 8, 2014. Since then, the program has enrolled several more talented students and graduated an additional three.

“I had always wanted an advanced degree,” recalls Robertson, “and over the years I had tried a couple of times and started degree programs and they just weren’t satisfying. When I found out about the MFA program at Jacksonville, I thought, ‘It’s time. It’s time for me to go back.’ In the undergraduate program, it’s a lot of payoff. ‘How do I make this work? How do I create this type of experience?’ But in the master’s program, you’re really reaching into the theory, the science, the history, the understanding of why you are doing what you’re doing.”

FALL 2015 : 11

A “Storyed” History for JSU

STUDENT MEDIA

BY KATIE CLINE

12 : GEM OF THE HILLS

The presses are still hot and the airwaves are a-buzzing on the campus of Jacksonville State University, where student-run media is celebrating a combined 120 years of production this year. The campus newspaper, “The Chanticleer,” celebrated its 80th anniversary in March and the radio station, WLJS, 92-J FM, is celebrating its 40th this September.

With such long and illustrious legacies, JSU’s communication department has seen more than a few greats walk its halls. Radio stars Rick Burgess and Bill Bussey – better known as “Rick & Bubba” – entertained college audiences in the 1980s before taking off as one of the most popular radio shows on air today. Former editor of “The Chanticleer” Mai Martinez is a news anchor and reporter at CBS Chicago.

There seems to be no stopping the outpouring of talent from JSU’s communication department, but none of this would be possible without the daring students who pioneered the newspaper and radio station decades ago.

First published in 1934 as “The Teacola” – a combination of “teachers” and “college,” JSU’s newspaper underwent several name changes before becoming the weekly periodical students and faculty know today. After “The Teacola,” it was renamed “The Collegian” in 1957 before finally becoming “The Chanticleer” in 1967. “Chanticleer” is a fitting name for a newspaper whose university mascot is the Gamecock. The word literally means, “a name given to a rooster, especially in fairy tales.”

Last March, “Chanticleer” staff, faculty and alumni gathered in Self Hall to celebrate 80 successful years and hundreds of publications. Among those in attendance was Ben Cunningham, managing editor of “The Anniston Star.” Cunningham first came to JSU in 1994 but took four years off from school from 1997 to 2001 to serve in the U.S. Air Force. He returned in 2001, and from 2001 to 2003 served as the editor-in-chief of “The Chanticleer.”

“People need to know what’s going on,” Cunningham said. “People have a great desire to know what’s going on – on their block, in their town, in their region, in their state, in their nation and in their world. Our Founders set up from the very beginning a system that would give all of us – any of us, not just the journalists – the right to say anything that we could find out. Anything that we thought everyone should know, we had the freedom to say. And they saw that as very important. The press is named in the First Amendment right up there with religion, so we’re seen as very basic to the way that American Democracy is supposed to work.”

Jeh Jeh Pruitt, a sports anchor and reporter at WBRC, Fox 6 in Birmingham, fondly recalls his days with “The Chanticleer” in the early and mid-1990s. He said his favorite memories are “All of those late nights the day before we printed, when we worked together as a team. We stayed there some nights until 2 or 3 in the morning. It was the best. To work with hardworking people who wanted the paper to be the best was a joy.”

Pruitt recommends all aspiring journalists at JSU work for “The Chanticleer.”

“If you are serious about being a journalist,” Pruitt said, “you need to be a reporter for this newspaper. It is one of the best tools that got me ready for the real world. It can help you do the things you need to do to be in media. ‘The Chanticleer’ was my foundation.”

An equally successful branch of JSU’s student media has been its radio station, WLJS, 92-J. Founded by student Mike Sandefer in 1975, WLJS, which stands for “We Love Jax State,” began with a lowly 10 watts broadcasting from inside Bibb Graves Hall via a radio antenna on top of the Houston Cole Library. Today, the 6,000-watt station broadcasts out of Self Hall with a $100,000 antenna on top of Chimney Peak that was donated in 2011 by Clear Channel Communications of Birmingham.

The station debuted on Monday, September 29, 1975 at noon with Led Zeppelin’s “Stairway to Heaven.”

“We sat around at my place, a bunch of us,” Sandefer remembers, “and thought, ‘What song will they be playing a gazillion years from now?’ So, we’re listening to music that’s popular in the 70s, and we’re thinking that this Led Zeppelin song is pretty cool, so we signed on with that.”

Now, every year on WLJS’s anniversary, the station pays tribute to that first broadcast by playing “Stairway to Heaven,” and even though it hasn’t been a “gazillion” years since that fateful night when the song was chosen, it is most certainly a song that has persevered through the ages, much like WLJS itself.

Sandefer said he has nothing but happy memories of his time at the station. “The best buzz you could get was when that phone lit up – and we had two or three lines back then – all lights lit up and flashing,” he said. “People were listening to you. And you’re just involved in their life at that moment playing music.”

To celebrate the station’s 40th anniversary, WLJS plans to air a special program on Sept. 29 at noon – 40 years to the minute that the station first signed on air. On Oct. 2, all former station employees and volunteers are invited to a celebration at 5 p.m. at the International House. Meanwhile, the current WLJS staff needs your input into a special music project called “The Top 40 of the Past 40.” If you worked at the station while you were at JSU, nominate songs for the project and share your memories on the Facebook Page, “WLJS 40th Anniversary.”

It is hard to imagine JSU without “The Chanticleer” and 92-J. For generations, the newspaper and radio station have been a source of information, entertainment and pride for students and alumni alike. Here’s to another 120 years of JSU student media!

Giving Back By Paying it Forward.....

Dillon Everett never had the opportunity to meet Janis Rhodes, long-time secretary of the JSU Department of Drama, who spent her career enthusiastically supporting the dreams of theatre students. She lost her battle with cancer in the summer of 2011, just before Everett enrolled at JSU.

"I hear she was such an amazing woman," Everett said

But Rhodes continues to make a difference in the lives of JSU students through the Janis C. Rhodes Memorial Scholarship, which was established in her memory to support outstanding drama students like Everett. It is one of 186 endowed scholarships currently offered through the JSU Foundation.

On February 23, Everett was able to meet Rhodes' husband, Dr. Gene Rhodes, and thank him for his support at the annual Founders Day scholarship luncheon. Nearly 150 guests gathered on campus to honor scholarship donors and recipients, as well as members of the Heritage and Founders Societies.

Donors were able to see how their gifts are making an impact on the next generation of leaders, while students had the opportunity to get to know their benefactors and express their gratitude.

The Foundation awarded more than $577,000 in scholarships over the 2014-2015 academic year to deserving students. Emerald Padgett, a senior majoring in exercise science and a member of the ROTC program, received the Maj. Dwayne Williams Memorial Scholarship. Upon graduation she will be commissioned into the U.S. Army as a second lieutenant and hopes to become a medical service officer. She said the scholarship helped her get the most out of her education.

"Through this experience, I have met some of my best friends, gone to Thailand, and had a college experience that I could never have dreamed of," Padgett said. "I am so proud of the leader and speaker I have become. I look forward to my future and being able to say that JSU was a huge stepping stone for me."

The Dwayne Williams Memorial Scholarship was established by JSU alumna and former employee, Pearl Williams, in memory of her son, Dwayne, who was killed at the Pentagon on September 11, 2001. The scholarship is for full-time undergraduate ROTC cadets and students enrolled in the College of Commerce and Business Administration.

Tara Martin, a junior majoring in marketing, is a recipient of the A.W. Bolt Scholarship, which was established by Birmingham attorney A.W. Bolt to support students of high academic achievement. Martin was orphaned at a young age and is putting herself through college. She works as a resident assistant on campus and volunteers with the Boys and Girls Club. After graduation she hopes to earn a master's degree and become a successful entrepreneur.

Danleigh McDaniel, a senior majoring in secondary education, was awarded the Harry and Jean Cottingham Scholarship. The 2012 Homecoming Queen is highly involved on campus, which she said was made possible by scholarships that prevented her from juggling multiple part-time jobs. She is president of her sorority, Alpha Omicron Pi, and is a Marching Ballerina, JSU Ambassador and Gamecock Orientation Leader. She aspires to be a middle or high school math teacher.

"Without the organizations I have been part of, I would never be where I am today," McDaniel said. "This university has done more for me than I have done for it, and for that I am forever grateful."

To learn how you can establish or contribute to a scholarship, contact the JSU Foundation at 256-782-5306 or 800-231-5291, ext. 5306. For a complete list of scholarships, visit our website at www.jsu.edu/foundation.

Meet the JSU Development Team!

University Development recently added two new development officers to its team and both are JSU alumnae: Christa Davis and Kim Dalesandro. Davis, who holds a bachelor's in health and business management, brings more than 25 years of experience in marketing, public relations, publications and advertising to JSU - most recently as vice president of marketing for Peachtree Planning. Dalesandro earned a B.S. in biology from JSU and has spent the past 15 years with BBVA Compass.

To accommodate the growing development family, the university recently purchased and renovated a historic property on Pelham Road, located next to Waffle House, and designated it the Development House. Stop by and visit or call 256-782-5605 to speak with the team about how you can support JSU. In September, our team of callers will kick off the 2015 Phonathon. Last year pledges and responses to the Phonathon campaign totaled nearly $200,000. Your patience and kindness on the phone means a great deal to our student callers. Remember, together we can make a difference for JSU!

university's past inspires
 for the marching southerners

BY ANGIE FINLEY

When the Marching Southerners and Ballerinas take the field this fall, fans will experience an all-out assault on their senses as the signature Southerners sound is complemented by new uniforms that pay homage to the past.

To develop the new uniform – the first for the Southerners since 2005 – JSU Director of Bands Dr. Kenneth Bodiford provided designers Michale Cesario and Fred J. Miller Inc. of Miamisburg, Ohio with as many photos of past Southerners uniforms as possible. His instructions were simple: incorporate hints of the Southerners' rich history with a fresh contemporary look. Bodiford said they nailed it.

"The upper left side of the uniform is a throwback to our uniform from the 1970s; the white flap is from the 1960s; and, finally, the sequins represent our current look," he said. "The new red is just a touch brighter than the old uniform, which will look amazing under the sun and stadium lights."

The pants of the new uniform, or "bibbers" as they're referred to in the band world, are similar to a one-piece body suit that extends over the torso and the shoulders. This garment ensures that the "band pants" will not slip down during a performance. The jacket is trimmed with a rounded white collar, which the designer said represents the "gentlemen" of the south. This was a feature of the Southerners uniform from the 1980s. On the right sleeve is the JSU logo featuring the feathered U; on the left is the Southerners signature "S." White gauntlets and a red shako with a white 14-inch plume and mirrored accents complete the ensemble.

The nearly all-black drum major uniforms will be equally striking on the field. Their style is very close to the band uniform, featuring the white flap, a red sequin baldric, black pants, jacket and shako. The color guard also has new pre-game uniforms, highlighted by a red and black ombre vest with the JSU logo in white across the chest. For pregame, the Ballerinas will wear their traditional "Santa" suits made out of the same red material as the new jackets. They will have a show-specific costume for halftime.

Perhaps the most attractive feature of the new uniforms is what spectators won't see but band members will feel: the uniforms are much thinner and machine washable. They are constructed out of moisture wicking 11.5-ounce polyester gabardine rather than the typical heavy wool materials of past uniforms. "Since we have all-day games and the sun is bearing down on the band throughout the game, everyone will be much more comfortable!" Bodiford explained.

The new uniforms were the inspiration for this year's Southerners production, "Celebration." Bodiford said the uniforms were designed to "Highlight JSU's bright and promising future while still paying homage to iconic people of the past that served as building blocks for our university."

There's a saying in the Southerners alumni group, the Grey Echelon: "Once a Southerner, Always a Southerner." This esprit de corps is very much taken into consideration when new shows and looks come together. It is this blending of cherished tradition and musical and marching innovation that lead to spectacular halftime shows that are destined to be imitated, but never duplicated.

Blow, Southerners!

HONORED WITH LASTING GIFTS

18 : GEM OF THE HILLS

LEFT: In honor of his 40 years of service, the JSU trustees have changed the name of Stadium Tower to William A. Meehan Hall and named Dr. Meehan a President Emeritus.

While the legacy of 11th JSU President Dr. William A. Meehan will undoubtedly stand on its own in the years ahead, prior to his retirement on June 30 took steps to guarantee he will be remembered for his many contributions to the institution he served for more than 40 years.

On April 3, friends gathered on campus to congratulate and celebrate Meehan at a retirement party in the Stadium Club. Among the gifts Meehan received were a key to the City of Jacksonville, a resolution from the U.S. House of Representatives, an American flag that flew over the U.S. Capitol during one of Meehan's visits to D.C., a resolution signed by all 35 Alabama senators, inscribed bricks to be installed along the Alumni House walkway for Meehan and First Lady Beth Meehan, and a coffee table book chronicling his time at JSU.

During the celebration, Dr. Charles Lewis, vice president for university advancement, also announced the creation of the Dr. William A. Meehan Endowed Scholarship - which had already accumulated $42,000 before the public announcement.

Former Alabama Secretary of State and JSU Trustees Chair Jim Bennett ended the fete with the unveiling of the official Meehan presidential portrait, which will hang in the boardroom of the Houston Cole Library.

On April 13, the JSU Faculty Senate honored Meehan with the planting of an oak and installation of a bench in front of Bibb Graves Hall. The next day, Delta Chi fraternity honored Meehan with a proclamation from Alabama Gov. Robert Bentley. As an undergraduate at JSU in the 1960s, Meehan was one of the first members of Delta Chi. He is also a former advisor for the fraternity.

At their quarterly meeting on April 20, the JSU Board of Trustees surprised Meehan with the largest gift, a resolution renaming Stadium Tower "William A. Meehan Hall" in his honor. The building was officially dedicated at a formal ribbon cutting ceremony on July 20. Family, friends and former colleagues of Dr. Meehan gathered around as JSU President John Beehler along with the Trustees led the ceremony in Meehan's honor. Earlier that day, the board named Meehan a President Emeritus.

JSU Robotics Team Captures National Title

The JSU Robotics Team brought home a national title at the 14th Annual Association of Technology, Management, and Applied Engineering Student Robotics Competition in St. Louis, Mo. earlier this year. It was JSU's second win since the team was established just four years ago.

The 17-member team had to design a robot capable of competing in four Olympic events, including football, without manual adjustments. Weighing in at less than 120 pounds and sporting a JSU logo and glowing red undercarriage, "Optimus Rooster" was designed to lift barbells, kick field goals, complete a 20-yard dash, and collect golf balls on a marathon course.

Scores from competition were combined with points for overall design, a poster session and audience voting. At the end of the day, the JSU team captured first place as well as the Best Fabrication and People's Choice Awards. Second prize went to Illinois State University while the University of Northern Iowa came in third.

The winning team included: Blake Ray, president; Jojo Barnes, vice president; Justin Caswell, treasurer; Tina Civitello, secretary; Drew Coffman; John Hill; Kacy Holsonback; Damarcus Lawson; Josie Mangum; Steven Martinez; Sinh Nguyen; John Norton; Joy Packard; Chris Pender; Aaron Rissler; Dexter Vernon; and Ryan Wise.

Housed within the Department of Technology and Engineering, the team is advised by department head Terry Marbut and instructor Phillip Dean. While the team is mostly comprised of applied engineering and computer science majors, membership is open to all JSU students. Marbut believes that participation is a great way for students to prepare for their future careers.

"We think it gives our students lots of practical experience beyond what they can gain in the classroom," Marbut said. "It prepares them for real-world deadlines that have to be met out on the job."

JSU offers undergraduate degrees in applied electronics engineering and applied manufacturing engineering. While traditional engineering programs tend to teach the student to develop the latest technology, JSU trains students to implement, or apply, the latest technology for today's companies.

To give back to the community, the JSU Robotics Team hosts the Alabama State VEX Robotics Championship each year for elementary, middle and high school students. Team members also volunteer at qualifying tournaments held at local schools throughout the year. The champs will travel to Pittsburg, Pa. in November to defend their title. If you are an alumnus who lives in the area please come out and cheer them on! Learn more at www.atmae.org

JSU's Accreditation Reaffirmed Through 2024

The board of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC) has reaffirmed JSU's accreditation for 10 years, through 2024. Accreditation is quality assurance in higher education based upon standards set by peers. To successfully complete an accreditation review, an institution or program must provide sufficient instructional and support services for students to achieve their educational goals. State universities like JSU are regionally accredited, and SACSCOC is one of eight regional accrediting bodies for colleges and universities in the U.S.

The process of preparing for reaccreditation is intensive and involves the entire campus. JSU must undergo a reaffirmation review and site visit every 10 years. In years past there have always been items to be addressed and a request for a one-year follow up report. This year's excellent report gives JSU a reprieve until 2019, when the university will be required to submit its Fifth-Year Interim Report to SACSCOC. At that time, JSU will also submit a final report on "Fast Forward: Using 21st Century Tools to Promote Critical Thinking," the university's quality enhancement plan (QEP), which should be winding down at about that time.

In a memo to his staff, then JSU President William A. Meehan said, "This is another significant milestone in the progress that all of you have been able to make in improving Jacksonville State University and the value that we offer our students and community. Thank you so much for all of your hard work in making this reaffirmation possible."

JSU Mourns Passing of Ninth President and University Photographer

Dr. Theron E. Montgomery

Dr. Theron E. Montgomery, ninth president of Jacksonville State University, passed away on February 10, 2015 in Calhoun County. He was 90 years old.

A Spartanburg, S.C., native, Montgomery played an instrumental role in JSU's development throughout his 36-year tenure. Arriving on campus in 1950 under the administration of President Houston Cole, he initially served as a sociology instructor. He was promoted in 1955 to dean of the university and, in 1971, as vice president for academic affairs. He assumed the presidency on July 1, 1981, and remained in the office until his retirement in 1986.

While Montgomery retired nearly 30 years ago, his impact continues to be felt on campus. During his administration, departments began seeking individual accreditation for their specific programs and the athletic teams excelled, receiving the All Sports award, which honored the outstanding program in the Gulf South Conference. The university also purchased the historic Roebuck home, which offers alumni a place to gather when they return to campus. The university's student commons facility - the Theron Montgomery Building - is named in his honor.

Opal R. Lovett

Opal R. Lovett, who saw Jacksonville State University through two name changes and worked for 36 years to capture decades of life and growth at his alma mater as the university's photographer, passed away on January 11, 2015.

Native to Sylacauga, Lovett began working at JSU in 1950 after earning a B.S. in history and English from the university in 1948. As university photographer, he was instrumental in providing photographs for "The Chanticleer", "Mimosa", and public relations releases. Lovett retired from the university in 1986. President Meehan presented a meritorious service award to him and his spouse - JSU

English instructor Opal A. Lovett - at the December 2001 commencement in honor of their lifetime achievements and service to the university. The couple established the Lovett Scholarship at JSU for deserving students majoring in history, English, or art. Mrs. Lovett passed away in 2006.

FOOTBALL PREVIEW

Twelve Jacksonville State Gamecocks were named to the 2015 Preseason All-Ohio Valley Conference Football Team at the league's annual Media Day on July 20, when the Gamecocks were also picked to repeat as champions in 2015.

The Gamecocks, who ran through the league with a perfect 8-0 record in 2014, received all but two first place votes by the league's head coaches and sports information directors, who are not allowed to vote for their own teams. They topped the preseason poll with 128 points, 21 points ahead of second-place Eastern Illinois.

They also dominated the Preseason All-Conference Teams, grabbing 41 percent of the 29 available spots. JSU placed six on the Preseason All-OVC Offense, five on Defense and one on special teams. Senior defensive lineman Devaunte Sigler, who was named the league's Defensive Player of the Year in 2014, was voted as the Preseason Defensive Player of the Year for 2015.

Fellow defensive linemen LaMichael Fannin and Chris Landrum joined Sigler up front on the Preseason All-OVC Defense, while senior defensive backs Jermaine Hough and DeBarrius Miller made up half of the backfield. Senior punter Hamish MacInnes also grabbed preseason honors on special teams.

Junior quarterback Eli Jenkins and junior wide receiver Josh Barge were on the offense. Senior tight end Bo Brummel, junior center Casey Dunn, senior guard Adam Wright and sophomore tackle Justin Lea were also on the Preseason All-OVC's offense.

JSU has been picked as high as No. 4 in the FCS preseason polls after posting a 10-2 record that saw them ranked as high as No. 2 before earning the No. 3 national seed in the FCS Playoffs a year ago.

JSU's home opener against Tennessee State on Sept. 19 was the first of two back-to-back weeks of great exposure for the Gamecocks, as both that game and the Sept. 26 matchup against UT Martin on the road were nationally televised on ESPN3.

"This is a great opportunity and national exposure for our football team and university," said interim athletics director Greg Seitz. "We are thrilled that we will have the opportunity to showcase our outstanding football program and facilities to a national audience, as well as our excellent game day atmosphere and the Marching Southerners.

"We are also pleased to play on ESPN3 the following week on the road, which should allow our fans, alumni and supporters the chance to watch the Gamecocks if they are not able to travel to the game," Seitz added. "We are also happy that we may have the opportunity to appear on ESPN3 an additional three times this season as a wild card selection."

Fans of the Gamecocks can order their five-game home season tickets online at www.jsugamecocksports.com or by calling the JSU ticket office at (256) 782-8499.

GAMECOCKS CLAIM 4TH OVC TITLE

Jacksonville State clinched its fourth Ohio Valley Conference football crown on November 15 with a gritty 27-20 victory over Eastern Illinois before a crowd of 14,925 at Burgess-Snow Field. It was the ninth consecutive win for the Gamecocks, their second-longest winning streak since moving to Division I in 1993. The victory earned the Gamecocks the OVC's automatic bid to the FCS playoffs.

It was the first time since JSU joined the OVC in 2003 that the Gamecocks won the conference after being selected as the preseason favorites. It was the first outright championship for the Gamecocks since 2004. JSU also won the OVC title in 2003, 2004 and 2011.

After a bye week, the Gamecocks hosted Sam Houston State at Burgess-Snow Field on December 6 in a second-round

FCS playoff game. The Bearkats held the No. 3 Gamecocks scoreless in the second half to claim a 37-26 victory, ending the Gamecocks' hopes of a repeat quarterfinals appearance. The Gamecocks' season ended with a 10-2 record for head coach John Grass in his first year. 📞

JSU CHEERLEADERS, COCKY PLACE 10TH AT NCA COLLEGE NATIONALS

Stand up and holler for JSU's Cheerleaders and Cocky, who recently placed 10th in the National Cheerleading Association College Nationals in Daytona Beach, Fla. The squad competed April 8-12 in the small co-ed division, where they placed tenth out of 18 teams.

"We are so proud of this team and what they have accomplished their first year at nationals," said Donna Callan, manager of athletic marketing and promotions and cheerleader administrator. "JSU was well-represented. We appreciate the support from athletics, the university and the community. Hats off to head coach Dave Almeida for all his hard work!"

This year's squad consists of: Dylan Burns, Jay Harris, Sam Harris, Karl

Kiesler, Brett Langston, Jamon Phillips, Jeremy Wynn, Lauren Ashmore, Brooklyn Bean, Alexis Byers, Brittany Cates, Hannah Cronan, Tori Frederick, Justice Gray, Kaiyla Isbell, Alicia Kittles, Leslie Puckett, Breana Whitten, Kelsey Wilson, and Cocky! 🐔

JSU RIFLE FINISHES 5TH AT NCAA CHAMPIONSHIPS

The Jacksonville State rifle team posted the third-best mark in the air rifle competition at the 2015 NCAA Rifle Championships on March 14 and maintained fifth place in the overall standings. It was the Gamecocks' 14th NCAA Championship appearance and their best finish since the 2011 season, when they finished fourth among the final eight teams.

The Gamecocks collected their ninth overall Ohio Valley Conference title on February 8 at their home range, and the fourth conference crown in a row. Jax State is led by six-time OVC Coach of the Year Ron Frost. Frost shared the 2015 OVC Coach of the Year honor with Murray State's Alan Lollar.

At the OVC tournament, sophomore Brandon Muske was named the

2015 OVC Air Rifle Athlete of the Year. Cole Tucker, Samantha Bullard and Dan McCall were named the OVC Air Rifle First Team. Bullard and Brent Book also were named to the OVC Smallbore First Team. 🏆

BECOME AN OFFICIAL JSU LICENSEE + VENDOR

Jacksonville State University contracts with Learfield Licensing, to manage its licensing services.

According to Mary Smith, Coordinator of Publications, “The JSU licensing program is designed to ensure that the Jacksonville State name and trademarks are used appropriately, consistently, in good taste and with high-quality reproduction, and to avoid misrepresentation of Jacksonville State University to the public.

Our goal is to establish a cooperative relationship with licensees to assist in the further development of a market of officially licensed products of Jacksonville State.”

For information about licensing, go to Learfield Licensing (www.learfieldlicensing.com) and click on the “licensing” link at the top of the page.

Vendors, even though approved and on the purchasing list, are not automatically licensees. They must still apply for a license in order to use JSU marks.

Apply for a License

In order to produce products bearing the marks of any Learfield Licensing client, manufacturers must apply for a license. Our application packet provides you with a comprehensive overview of the licensing process, the application itself, and a list of all of the accounts we manage.

From there, one can download the license application. For more information, contact Mary Smith at msmith@jsu.edu.

Companies that wish to sell goods and services to JSU can do so through the Procurement and Fixed Assets office. There are two ways JSU purchases goods and services—bid and non-bid.

Bids

The State of Alabama Competitive Bid Law requires that like items costing $15,000 or more in a fiscal year be bid. The State of Alabama Finance Department bids contracts that JSU can use for items such as furniture. JSU is also able to purchase from various purchasing consortiums if the contracts from these consortiums comply with the state bid law. Some examples of items for which JSU issues bids are paper products, sports medicine supplies, bus transportation, certain equipment, and some services. Prospective vendors are invited to submit their name, mailing address, email address and type of products or services provided to purchasing@jsu.edu.

JSU sends bid requests to vendors electronically. Bid responses from vendors must still be submitted in sealed, hard-copy form. The State of Alabama Competitive Bid Law does not allow for electronic bid responses.

To see a list of current bid opportunities, visit the Purchasing website, www.jsu.edu/purchasing/current-bids.

Non-Bids

For purchases that do not require a bid contract, campus departments may select the vendor of their choice. It is the responsibility of the vendor to keep the contact information on file up to date. Pamela Findley, Director of Procurement and Fixed Assets, says that while the university is bound by bid law and must abide by all applicable rules and regulations, JSU is always open to doing business with alumni. “JSU is proud of the continued relationships we have with our alumni and we appreciate opportunities to be part of their business success,” she said

For more information, call the Procurement and Fixed Assets office at 256-782-5152 or visit their website at www.jsu.edu/purchasing.

STADIUM CLUB LOBBY GETS NEW NAME

“Get an education, sons, they can’t take it away from you.”

This was the advice that Samuel Royce “Mutt” Bryant gave his sons Ronald, Danny and Dennis. Now, when visitors enter the lobby of the JSU Stadium Club, they’ll see something else that can’t be taken away—the legacy of a father who championed his sons’ higher education. Thanks to a generous gift of $100,000 by Danny and Ro Bryant, the fifth floor entrance of Stadium Tower has been renamed the Samuel Royce “Mutt” Bryant Lobby in his honor.

32 : GEM OF THE HILLS

Born in 1918, Mutt Bryant finished sixth grade at Ohatchee before he was put behind a mule and given a field to plow. After serving as an Army infantryman in Hiroshima, Nagasaki and Tokyo during World War II, he used his GI benefits to build a career as an electrician. While he and his wife Margie (Chastain) raised their sons, Mutt worked hard in various foundries. He eventually retired from Anniston Army Depot.

All three sons followed their father’s advice and earned their college degrees. Ronald attended Freed-Hardeman

University and served as a Church of Christ minister for 52 years. Danny received a bachelor’s degree in business in 1969 from JSU, where he was a founding member of Delta Chi. He spent his career in the oil business. Dennis graduated from JSU in 1976, earned an MBA from Syracuse University and had a distinguished military career.

NEW ADDITION FOR 2016 SEASON WOMEN'S SAND VOLLEYBALL

At its April 20 quarterly meeting, the Jacksonville State Board of Trustees approved the addition of Women's Sand Volleyball as the Gamecocks' 17th varsity sport. The Gamecocks will field a team beginning in the spring of 2016 in what is one of the NCAA's fastest growing campus sports. At the recent NCAA Convention in Washington, D.C., the NCAA voted to approve sand volleyball as the 90th NCAA Championship.

The Gamecocks will compete with the same players and coaches on their indoor volleyball team, which plays its season during the fall, and will use the sand court adjacent to Stephenson Hall. In sand volleyball, teams consist of five pairs of players. The first team to win three of five matches is the winner. The sand volleyball season, which is a minimum of eight and maximum of 16 dates, begins on March 1, 2016. The NCAA Championships will be held the first week of May.

In the 2015 season, the NCAA had 42 Division I schools and six Division II schools sponsoring sand volleyball. Of the 48 Division I and Division II programs, 22 are in the southeast, with UAB, Georgia State and Mercer the closest to JSU's campus. The Gamecocks will be the only program in the Ohio Valley Conference with sand volleyball and will compete as an independent.

Law Partners Buttram and Hopper

DISCOVER THEY HAVE MORE IN COMMON THAN JUST THEIR PROFESSION

BY HEATHER GREENE

Of the many perks of attending JSU, perhaps the most important is the lifelong connections formed between students and alumni spanning generations and representing diverse backgrounds.

One such connection happened between Dean Buttram and Chad Hopper, JSU alumni from different generations who are not only partners in the same law firm but also recipients of JSU's prestigious Daugette Award. The award is given to the graduating male with the highest GPA in each class.

A native of Gadsden, Dean Buttram earned three degrees between 1972-1975. "I could not get enough of the 'Friendliest Campus in the South'," he laughed.

Buttram was active on campus, serving as a SGA senator and interim SGA president in 1973, chairing the Greek homecoming parade in 1972, serving as a charter member of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity in 1971, and working as a student employee in the financial aid office. He received the Daugette Award in 1972.

Buttram was not the first member of his family to graduate from JSU. His grandmother, Dessa Robertson, graduated from the Jacksonville Normal School in 1922 and subsequently taught 1st through 11th grade in Calhoun County. He married JSU alumna Kathy Roe Buttram, a former reporter for the "Birmingham News" and assistant business editor at the "Orlando Sentinel". She is currently a successful advertising consultant in Centre.

JSU attendance continues to be part of the Buttram family tradition. Buttram's son H. Dean Buttram, III, earned his undergraduate and master's degrees at JSU. After earning a doctorate at the University of Alabama, he returned to JSU where he is now a criminal justice professor.

"JSU prepared me for any career I chose to pursue," said Buttram. "While obtaining my graduate degrees, I also completed all the science and math classes necessary for medical and dental school. I attended the Samford School of Pharmacy for a while. I was accepted to attend both the Greenbriar School of Osteopathic Medicine in West Virginia and the University of Louisville School of Dentistry. In the end, I chose to become a lawyer."

In 1978, Buttram earned his law degree at Samford University's Cumberland School of Law. After practicing from 1978 to 1998, President William J. Clinton nominated him for a vacancy on the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Alabama. The U.S. Senate unanimously confirmed the nomination in October 1998. He served four years before returning to private practice in 2002, when he rejoined his former partner Bill Hawkins and a new partner and JSU graduate, Chad Hopper.

Soon after, Buttram and Hopper found themselves discussing fond memories of JSU when they discovered they were both Daugette Award winners.

“I have known Chad all of his life and followed his academic career as he attended and graduated from JSU and completed law school,” Buttram said. “We learned that both of us were Daugette Award winners several years ago while having a friendly argument about which one of us was the smartest. We continue that argument to this day. The nerve of the guy to even think such a thing! I feel like we were both destined to be attorneys, and being JSU graduates brings us together with a special camaraderie that I believe only JSU can lead you to.”

Chad Hopper graduated from JSU in 1997, summa cum laude, with a bachelor’s in accounting. Twenty-five years after Buttram, he received the prestigious Daugette Award. As an undergraduate, he was active in Baptist Campus Ministries and intramural sports. He went on to earn his law degree from the University of Alabama.

“I am very proud of my time at JSU,” Hopper said. “I met friends that I still stay in contact with and that I treasure. I enjoyed all of my classes, especially classes with Mr. Floyd Kirby in the accounting department. The education that I received at JSU was second to none and made law school an easy transition for me. Many of my favorite memories were associated with the Baptist Campus Ministries.”

In 2000, Hopper began his law practice with attorney Bill Hawkins in Centre. Together, the three formed Buttram, Hawkins & Hopper, LLC.

“Dean and I both have a great sense of pride as it relates to our alma mater and the educational foundation that we received at JSU,” Hopper said. “Since I grew up in Centre, I always knew that Mr. Buttram was a proud graduate of Jacksonville State, prior to working with him.”

Hopper and his wife, Brooke Reynolds Hopper, have two children: Cade, 9; and Anna, 5. Mrs. Hopper is a kindergarten teacher at Centre Elementary School. Hopper still maintains his connection to his alma mater and tries to make it to at least one JSU football game a year.

“I love coming back to campus to see how much has changed,” he said. “I am grateful for all that the university did for me, and I can’t imagine a better place to attend school.”

From Alabama Days to Arabian Nights

ONE GRADUATE'S JOURNEY TO THE PALACE

BY HEATHER GREENE

36 : GEM OF THE HILLS

Growing up in Glencoe, Alabama, Leah Bryn Thornhill had no idea that life would take her to a Saudi Arabian palace.

After graduating from JSU in 2003 with a B.S. in nursing, she found herself working as a nurse at a hospital in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. One individual noticed that she was independent, strong-willed and a critical thinker and invited her to work in the palace. Today, she is a registered nurse for the King of Saudi Arabia and his immediate family members. Her job has afforded her the opportunity to travel and meet two U.S. presidents, a pope, the Queen of England, and many more interesting faces.

While across the globe, Thornhill is pursuing a Master of Science in nursing from JSU, concentrating in community health. While both of her parents were college graduates, she is the first in her family to go on to graduate school.

"It's funny," Thornhill said. "I never knew growing up I actually had a choice of not attending college."

In addition to juggling the duties of being a nurse to a royal family and a graduate student, Thornhill is also mother to three children – ages 10, 12 and 14 – with one on the way. Her husband, Dr. Jose De-Feo, also works at the palace as a veterinarian for racehorses.

Dr. Rebecca Peinhardt, professor and director of graduate nursing programs at JSU, has had the opportunity to frequently interact with Thornhill over the past year of her graduate studies, keeping up-to-date on Thornhill's progress and encouraging her along her journey.

"Our MSN programs are offered totally online," Peinhardt explains. "All of our MSN students take their classes online, but participate in advanced clinical practice as a nurse in the city or area where they live. In Leah's case, that is in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. She has shared that she has a heart for women's health and children's health and a desire to work to improve health care education and prevention practices in the kingdom. She wants to learn advanced nursing skills to plan community programs to expand and improve best practices in the health care systems where she lives."

As JSU's MSN program is entirely online, its students are located across the world – a fact Peinhardt keeps in mind when interacting with all of her students, including Thornhill.

"She is halfway around the world from JSU, living and working in a culture that is very different from our Southern culture," Peinhardt said. "I am mindful to not only respect Leah as a student, but also of the fact that she is living and studying in an area of the world which is very different from the residential JSU community here."

Thornhill exuberantly affirms that she loves her job.

"I chose nursing because I always knew I wanted to practice and be in the medical profession," Thornhill said. "I chose nursing because it's such an open field for growth and change in many directions and you can experience many things in nursing. When you find what you love, the sky is the limit."

As with all her graduate students, Peinhardt's hope for Thornhill is that she continue to find professional success. "She has a heart for nursing and a heart for the Saudi people," said Peinhardt. "She is an ambassador for community health, prevention of disease, improvements in health care, and lastly for JSU. I appreciate Leah and the difference she is making and will make in the future. She embodies a global health outreach. The JSU College of Nursing is now a part of that global initiative!"

Cortlyn Watson

CROWNED MISS JSU 2015

BY CHRISTINA MACDONALD

Lights shining, adrenaline pumping, crowds cheering. No, we're not talking about the Super Bowl, although it is an elite, competitive, dream-come-true for participants. We're talking about the Miss Alabama pageant. This summer, JSU nursing major Cortlyn Watson fulfilled a lifelong dream by representing the university at the event as Miss JSU 2015.

More than just sequins and hairspray, the prestigious Miss Alabama pageant gives young women of distinction the opportunity to earn college scholarships while gaining interview skills and self-confidence. Along with the coveted title and tiara comes the opportunity to represent the state at the Miss America pageant.

Watson – who hails from Cleveland, Alabama – was crowned Miss JSU in January as just a freshman in an impressive display of talent, grace and poise.

"I knew going into my freshman year that I was going to compete for the title of Miss JSU," Watson said, "but I never thought I would actually win my freshman year and have this opportunity so early!"

Watson has been competing in pageants since she was just six months old and has grown to love the pageant atmosphere. For the 20-year-old, it has literally taken a lifetime of hard work to achieve this goal.

"It has always been a dream of mine to compete in Miss Alabama, so as soon as they announced me as the winner of the Miss JSU pageant and it finally soaked in my first thought was 'Wow, this is real. I'm going to compete on the Miss Alabama stage!'"

JSU is no stranger to exceptional young women with big dreams like Watson. Since 1971, seven former Miss JSUs have gone on to be crowned Miss Alabama: Ceil Jenkins Snow, 1971; Jane Rice Holloway, 1973; Julie Houston Elmer, 1977; Teresa Cheatham Stricklin, 1978; Tammy Little Haynes, 1984; Heather Whitestone McCallum, 1994; and Jamie Langley, 2007.

More than 35 years after she wore the Miss Alabama crown, Teresa Cheatham Stricklin – the first runner-up in the 1979 Miss America pageant – is now a wife, mother, and a vocal instructor at her alma mater. Heather Whitestone McCallum, who was the first hearing impaired woman to ever be crowned Miss America, earned the title in 1995. She is now a motivational speaker and lives with her husband and three sons on Saint Simon's Island in Georgia. Jamie Langley, Miss Alabama 2007, is now a TV anchor and reporter at Montgomery's WAKA, CBS-8.

Watson follows a long line of remarkable young women to hail from Jacksonville State University and represent the school on the Miss Alabama stage. Plan to come back to campus this winter to see the crowning of Miss JSU 2016. If history is any indication, a future Miss America could be in our midst!

MENTORSHIP PROGRAM CONNECTS ALUMNI AND STUDENTS

Want to give back to your alma mater while training the next generation of leaders in your field? Become an alumni mentor through the Offices of Alumni Relations and Career Services.

Mentoring programs are becoming an essential part of most universities in today's job market. For students, the program provides first-hand knowledge about their chosen profession and gives them a competitive edge through networking opportunities and job leads. For alumni, it's a chance to stay in touch with their alma mater and a resource for finding the best interns and graduates.

JSU alumnus Keith Mitchell ('76), co-founder of Mitchell, Hartley & Bechtel Advisers, LLC, recently served as a mentor to a senior business student. He wishes he had participated in such a program when he was graduating from JSU.

"As I think back on my senior year and graduation, I know that I would have benefitted from having someone who could have provided guidance and perspective as I was embarking on my career," Mitchell said. "The alumni mentoring program seemed like a way to give back to the university in a tangible and practical way."

Starting this fall, alumni and current JSU students can register online for the mentoring program - uploading bios and resumes and searching for mentees or mentors through JLink. The online portal is also the place for students and alumni to search for jobs and for employers to post free job and internship announcements.

"This online program will remove most of the manual process and make it quicker and easier to search for and create an alumni/student relationship," said Kaci Ogle, director of Alumni Relations.

While JLink is a great service, it is only one of career development opportunities now provided by JSU. From day one, freshmen - particularly undecided majors - are encouraged to meet with Career Services to complete a career assessment. The office provides the Myer-Briggs Personality Inventory, resume and cover letter critiques, and information on internships and co-ops. Career fairs and etiquette dinners are held on campus each year to further provide students with the tools they need to start their careers. Alumni on the job market can also take advantage of resume and cover letter critiques, career counseling and career fairs.

To learn more about these programs, visit www.jsu.edu/alumni and www.jsu.edu/careerservices. Questions? Contact Kaci Ogle in Alumni Affairs at 256-782-5405 or kogle@jsu.edu or Becca Turner in Career Services at 256-782-5485 or btturner@jsu.edu.

If you are an alumnus considering becoming a mentor, Mitchell has a word of advice:

"While your contribution is significant to the student, the real reward is the satisfaction you will gain from making a difference at a critical time in the student's life."

Student Alumni Association to Celebrate 10th Anniversary

The Student Alumni Association – formerly known as Students Today, Alumni Tomorrow – will celebrate its 10th anniversary with a reunion of former and current members on Oct. 30, 6 p.m., at the Alumni House. Founded in 2005 as Students Today, Alumni Tomorrow (STAT), the organization changed its name to the Student Alumni Association (SAA) in 2013 and has become one of the fastest growing organizations on campus. The reunion is free and open to all members. Hors d'oeuvres will be served. RSVP at 877-JSU-Alum or alumni@jsu.edu.

All Former Athletes Now Invited to Join the J-Club

It's not just football anymore! Members of the J-Club voted this year to realign the alumni organization, originally open to only former football players, to include all former JSU athletes, coaches and support staff. As an official alumni chapter of the JSU National Alumni Association, the J-Club's mission is to support JSU's student-athletes and keep them engaged with the university after graduation. Interested in joining the J-Club? Call 877-JSU-Alum or e-mail alumni@jsu.edu.

Omega Psi Phi Fraternity Forms Alumni Chapter

This summer, the JSU National Alumni Association approved the creation of a new alumni group for Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. Royce Woodruff ('94/'04) and Leroy Wiley ('11) represented the alumni of the fraternity during the board meeting. Over the past year, the organization met all of the board's requirements to become an established chapter. Woodruff will serve as the chapter's president and sit on the alumni board. The organization is in the process of locating all of its former members. If you were a member of the fraternity, please e-mail your contact information to alumni@jsu.edu or call 877-JSU-ALUM. A reunion is planned for November 14.

GAMECOCKS GO BRAGH!

Just days after St. Patrick's Day in March, 26 JSU alumni and friends traveled to The Emerald Isle with the JSU Alumni Association for a Taste of Ireland tour with Collette Vacations. The seven-day journey included overnight stays in Dublin, Killarney and Cong. The travelers kissed the Blarney stone, toured the Guinness Storehouse and Tullamore Dew whiskey distillery, walked the shores of the beautiful Dingle Peninsula and the Cliffs of Moher, and even stayed overnight at Ashford Castle. Interested in traveling abroad with your fellow Gamecocks? The Alumni Association is organizing a trip to Tuscany for March 2016. To make your reservation, contact Kaci Ogle at 256-782-5405 or kogle@jsu.edu.

Graduating Miss Daisy

72-YEAR-OLD PROVES IT'S NEVER TOO LATE TO EARN DEGREE

BY HEATHER GREENE

At 72, Daisy Mae Stanley wears many hats: wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, Episcopalian, computer analyst, artist, painter, printmaker and gardener. In May, she added another cap to her collection – a mortarboard, signifying her status as a JSU graduate.

A graduate of Shades Valley High School in Birmingham, she relocated to Jacksonville when her husband got a job at the Anniston chemical weapons incinerator. She began taking classes at JSU just for fun but racked up 400 credit hours over the years. At the encouragement of JSU Registrar Emily White, she decided to put those credits toward a degree.

“Why not? I’m only 72,” thought Stanley, who had been hesitant initially about “wasting” a year of her life taking the science courses necessary to graduate. She now encourages people to take classes they might not normally take to learn something new. As an artist and liberal arts major, her favorite courses were her art classes.

“The art department and its faculty and staff are like a family to me,” she said. “I have found a new respect for the ‘required’ or core courses also. I truly enjoy learning outside my field. I encourage every student to get everything they can out of even those things they are not interested in. They might find they love it.”

Now that she has graduated, what is next for the lady younger students affectionately call “Miss Daisy?” This fall, she begins another degree. She would also like to write a memoir and a children’s book, garden, make art, and continue working with and encouraging the art students at JSU. She has a dream of somehow bringing young artists and the elderly together for therapeutic art classes.

No matter where she goes next, Stanley is certain to continue being a lifelong learner. 🙅

JSU Alum's Recipe for Success

BLENDS BITTER, SWEET

BY HEATHER GREENE

From suffering personal tragedy during his freshman year to washing dishes for campus dining and realizing a love for the culinary arts, Tradale Jefferson's time at JSU molded him into the person he is today.

The Birmingham native entered JSU as a biology pre-med major. During his freshman year, his father committed suicide, leaving him deeply grieved. After seeking assistance from JSU Counseling Services, he felt led to help others dealing with similar circumstances. He changed his major to social work and became an assistant to Linda Shelton, JSU's lead counselor. Together they established a student chapter of the National Alliance on Mental Illnesses, now Active Minds.

While JSU was helping Jefferson cope with loss, it also introduced him to the hobby that became his career - cooking. Working in the dish room on campus, he was noticed by the kitchen manager, who recognized his potential and reasigned him to the grill. After a semester of working on the grill, he was promoted to night cook and eventually full-time student manager.

Although some might find the responsibility of full-time work too much for a full-time student, Jefferson said cooking also served as a stress reliever for him, especially during finals. His friends benefited from his cooking, as well, because when finals week rolled around, he cooked everything in his refrigerator and invited them over to his apartment for a pre-finals dinner.

"I would then go to sleep, take my test the next day, and be great," explained Jefferson.

Cooking was not Jefferson's only college activity. He founded the JSU Pep Squad, which devotedly wore fan t-shirts and went to every JSU football game, and was actively involved in campus ministries around JSU. He is now a licensed and ordained minister.

After graduating from JSU in 2009, he served as a restaurant manager and then a social worker, but transitioned out of that line of work in March 2012 when he decided to pursue his love of cooking full-time. He is now the owner of 180 Grill Catering based in Hoover. From small beginnings, Jefferson's business has grown into catering everything from weddings, bridal showers, birthday parties, to corporate events. Recently he received a contract to provide lunch for a private school during the week.

"I've always liked to cook, but being at JSU helped me learn technicalities and legal things, gold standards that are out there," Jefferson said. When asked how JSU prepared him for where he is today, Jefferson said, "Connections! To this day, I still have major connections with people on campus and around the country who have graduated and gone on to do great things."

JSU Alumna Builds School, Camp For Kids

Vonda Barbour White – founder and executive director of Pillsbury College Prep and Camp Pillsbury in Minnesota – recently returned to her alma mater to inspire and encourage a new class of JSU alumni. She served as keynote speaker at the spring commencement ceremony on May 1.

White came to JSU from Boise, Idaho in 1984 on a teen pageant scholarship. As a sophomore, she was elected as JSU's second-ever female Student Government Association president. She graduated with honors in 1988, earning a communications degree.

After college, White moved to Florida, where she excelled in sales and executive leadership by the age of 27. Nine years later, she began her own company, selling insurance to colleges and universities nationwide. After a successful career in that field, she recently bought a college campus in Minnesota to pursue her passion of running a summer camp with circus arts, performing arts, and much more. She also started a boarding school for domestic and international 6th-12th grade students called Pillsbury College Prep, where summer camp activities are offered after school and on weekends to help students excel personally and academically.

White believes “Life is an adventure, one worth living to your fullest while making a positive difference on others as you create and leave your legacy.” Learn more about her adventures at www.camp-pillsbury.com.

FORMER GAMECOCKS

Called Up to Majors

A pair of former Gamecock baseball standouts were promoted to the big leagues over the summer. Outfielder Todd Cunningham, who played for JSU from 2008-2010, made his second stint with the Atlanta Braves, and pitcher Donovan Hand, who pitched for the Gamecocks from 2005-2007, was called up by the Cincinnati Reds in June.

Cunningham, a second-round pick by the Braves in 2010, was called up on May 13 and went on a tear to start his second run in Major League Baseball and his first since 2013. The Jacksonville native made his season debut at Miami on May 15 and went 3-for-4 with a double and an RBI as the Braves' starting left fielder. In the three-game series at Miami, he was 8-for-12 with four runs scored.

Hand, a 14th-round pick by the Milwaukee Brewers in 2007, also made his first appearance in the big leagues since 2013 this summer, when the Reds called him up on June 16. In his first season with the Reds organization, Hand pitched effectively for the team's Triple A affiliate
