If these comments sound familiar, join the Office of Distance Education as it presents a Web Seminar Broadcast on...

Managing to Thrive in the Online Classroom

This is a 90-minute online seminar presented by Lawrence C. Ragan, Director of Instructional Design and Development for Penn State’s World Campus. Learn ideas for managing the online classroom, explained in five primary categories: authoring course content, teaching strategies, revision and management of existing courses, institutional approaches, and support strategies.

By participating in this webinar, you’ll be able to:

- Define specific strategies for managing the online workload in each of the five categories - authoring of course content, teaching strategies, revision and management of existing courses, institutional approaches, and support strategies
- Actively contribute to the development of new strategies in several of these project categories
- Determine how to adopt several strategies for personal use in their online classrooms
- Understand what resources are available to continue exploration of new and emerging strategies

Who Should Attend?

Faculty, Department Heads Deans and Administrators

January 18, 2007
12:00 p.m. - 1:30 p.m
Room 1103A
Houston Cole Library

Light refreshments will be served