ALUMNI LEAD JSU SOFTBALL
TO WINNING TRADITION

DEAR ALUMNI AND FRIENDS,

At JSU, we are Transformative, Innovative and Engaged for Success (JSU TIES). In making this theme a reality, we are experiencing a “renaissance” on campus. As the dictionary indicates, we indeed are having a “rebirth, revival, and period of new growth or activity.” It is truly an exciting time to be a Gamecock.

Many transformational things are happening on campus. We are renovating two historic buildings (page 6), updating and modernizing classrooms (page 16), constructing a new baseball stadium, and will soon break ground on a new student recreation center. We continue to add new programs to support our students, such as the Center of Excellence for Veteran Student Success (page 6) and a Transfer Pathways Program to ease the transition for students into JSU from two-year schools (page 24).

On the academic front, JSU has been recognized as one of the nation’s top producers of Fulbright Scholars and we are better serving our community through outreach efforts like the new Center for Manufacturing Support Association (SAA) continues to grow with over 100 members. It is great to be a Gamecock!

This summer, campus will be busy with construction/renovations of the Gamecock Baseball Field as well as Sparkman and Daugette Halls. We will welcome our 2017 freshman class to campus through summer orientations. Freshman Convocation on August 22 will begin their fall semester with a pep rally, picnic and, of course, the ringing of the bell!

Thank you for all you continue to do to assist in our enrollment efforts and be JSU’s “Boots on the Ground” in your area. We want and we need you to be involved. We, as alumni, are the best recruiters for JSU. With your help, we can continue to help enrollment management efforts to increase enrollment and welcome generations to our alumni family.

GREETINGS GAMECOCKS!

We have recently welcomed 727 graduates to our alumni family following the April 28 commencement ceremonies. Our total network of alumni now exceeds 60,000! And our Student Alumni

It is hard to believe that nearly two years have passed since the first lady and I joined the JSU family. It is a privilege to serve as president of your alma mater. I am proud of all that we have accomplished together and look forward to continued success in the coming months and years ahead.

Go Gamecocks!

Homecoming has been set for October 27-29 and we hope you will be able to join us for a weekend full of activities. Check out the With Alumni section on page 20 for the latest alumni news and upcoming events.

As always, we love to hear from you. Keep us informed on all the amazing things that are happening in your life and we will continue to keep you updated on all the amazing things happening with our alma mater. I hope to see you soon!

FOUNDER'S DAY

Two-thousand Seventeen

In celebration of the anniversary of the founding of Jacksonville State in February 1883, University Advancement hosts Founder's Day each February to honor the past and recognize those driving the future of the university.

Outstanding students who received scholarships from the JSU Foundation were invited to meet and thank their donors on Feb. 22. Likewise, donors were invited to meet their scholarship recipients and learn about JSU's achievements over the past year. President John M. Beehler delivered a State of the University address, after which students shared how a scholarship was making an impact in their lives.

Congratulations to the students who received scholarships and thank you to those who have given back to the university by supporting these outstanding students! 🍷

Camden Swatts Crowned Miss JSU 2017

JSU freshman Camden Swatts was crowned Miss JSU 2017 in January. The dietetics major will go on to compete in the Miss Alabama Pageant, to be held June 7-10 at Samford University. Swatts is native to Beauregard, Ala., and aspires to be a registered dietician. Her talent is dance. Since 1971, seven former Miss JSUs have gone on to be crowned Miss Alabama: Ceil Jenkins Snow, 1971; Jane

Rice Holloway, 1973; Julie Houston Elmer, 1977; Teresa Cheatham Stricklin, 1978; Tammy Little Haynes, 1984; Heather Whitestone McCallum, 1994; and Jamie Langley, 2007. Stricklin went on to win first runner-up in the Miss America Pageant in 1979 while Whitestone was crowned Miss America in 1995. 🇺🇸

✿ Built in 1970, Sparkman Hall is to be renovated and reopened by this fall.

University Renovating Sparkman and Daugette Halls

Two campus mainstays, each cloaked in history, are getting a facelift. In November, the JSU Board of Trustees announced that Sparkman and Daugette Halls will be renovated to add much-needed student housing to campus as student enrollment continues to increase. The board approved a $10 million non-bank qualified tax-exempt loan to fund the project. The revenue gained from housing fees paid by occupants will service the renovation debt. Renovations are underway and the university hopes to reopen these student residence halls in the fall. 🇺🇸

JSU Opens New Veterans Center

JSU celebrated the grand opening of the new Center of Excellence for Veteran Student Success on November 10, 2016. The ribbon cutting and open house were held at the center, located in Daugette Hall, following the Jacksonville State and City of Jacksonville's annual Veterans Day ceremony.

Funded by a $330K grant from the U.S. Department of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education, the new center supports veteran students with the goal of increasing enrollment, good academic standing, persistence, and graduation rates at the university. 🇺🇸

Governor Appoints Rusty Fuller to Board of Trustees

The Alabama Senate has confirmed Gov. Robert Bentley's appointment of Rusty Fuller to the Jacksonville State University Board of Trustees, effective immediately. He will represent Congressional District 6, filling a seat left vacant following the death of longtime trustee Jim Bennett in August.

A JSU alumnus and former football standout, Fuller earned a bachelor's degree in physical education from the university in 1985, where he was inducted into the Phi Kappa Phi honor society. He began his professional career as a biology teacher and coach at Thompson High School in Alabaster, Ala., before transitioning to pharmaceutical sales with what is now Novartis Pharmaceuticals Corporation. He has 30 years of pharmaceutical experience, including 23 years in sales management. As a student at JSU, Fuller played football from 1979 to 1983. He was a member of two Gulf South Conference championship teams in 1981 and 1982. He participated in the NCAA playoffs in 1980, 1981 and 1982 and was named to the GSC Team of the Decade for the 1980s and the Team of the Quarter Century for 1971-1995. He was also named to the JSU All Century Team in 2003 and was inducted into the JSU Sports Hall of Fame in 2013. Fuller has been married to JSU alumna Joy Biles Fuller for 33 years. They reside in Vestavia Hills and have three children, four grandchildren, and attend Church of the Highlands in Birmingham.

"Rusty Fuller is a great addition to the JSU Board of Trustees," said President John M. Beehler. "He truly loves our university and is dedicated to its success across all dimensions." 🇺🇸

CHEER FOR THE HOME TEAM:

Alumni Lead JSU Softball to Winning Tradition

By Chris Brown

Near the northeast portion of campus, there’s a short piece of road – less than a quarter-mile in length – that connects the City of Jacksonville to the world of university softball where Jacksonville State has become a powerhouse. Like its namesake, Jana McGinnis Lane allows people from various cities and states to come together and enjoy college softball.

For those fortunate enough to don a red-and-white Jacksonville State uniform, however, they leave University Field with something more – something life changing.

“Coach McGinnis will take girls from different regions and different upbringings and different cultures and get them to buy into this program, because she’s the common denominator,” said former JSU standout Ella Denes. “For me, she helped me be OK with who I was, both as a player and a person. I always had trouble balancing the competitive demand of sports and the type of ‘nice’ personality I have, but she showed me first-hand that you can have both. In a lot of ways, she just gave me confidence in myself more than anyone ever has. Ultimately, she’s the sparkplug that makes everything go.”

The sparkplug that the reigning Ohio Valley Conference Player of the Year refers to as her former college head coach was placed inside the engine of a vehicle – which was about to go through a major restoration – in 1994. After a brief, one-year stint at Cherokee County High School, which resulted in a Class 4A state championship in basketball, McGinnis accepted the softball head coaching position at her alma mater a year before the school made the decision to jump to the Division I level.

During the two seasons Jacksonville State was making the transition to the game’s highest level, McGinnis coached her team to a combined 48-38 record before exploding onto the Division I scene in 1996 with an overall record of 46-11, including a 13-3 mark in Atlantic Sun play. To this day, McGinnis has only one sub-.500 season on her resume and it came in 2001 when the Gamecocks finished with a 24-27 record.

“Dana, my sister, and I played here as college basketball players – Jacksonville State is our home,” McGinnis said. “Jacksonville State is really all we’ve ever known. Our mom retired from here and there’s four girls in my family and we’ve all got degrees from here. This is just our family.”

Initially, McGinnis turned down the softball opening twice before athletic director Jerry Cole asked her to sit down with him, face-to-face.

“He wanted to talk about where he saw Jacksonville State going and its athletic program,” McGinnis said. “I told him, ‘I had played women’s slow pitch (softball), so I don’t feel like I’m the right person to take this job but I’ll learn it.’ He then looked me right in the eyes and said, ‘I’m not asking you to win 20 games. I’m asking you to recruit good people and get this program’s reputation up,’ and I said, ‘I can do that.’”

Even though Jacksonville State’s athletic director from 1973 to 1997 didn’t technically ask McGinnis to “win 20 games,” that’s what the Spring Garden High School graduate has done every year since 1995, including ten 40-win seasons and nine more 30-win seasons. However, when asked about the level of success of JSU’s softball program, McGinnis is the first to defer any personal accolades and recognition. She’d rather the attention be turned to current and former players as well as assistant coaches who have put in time and effort during practices and games to get the Gamecocks where they are now. In fact, the editors of GEM had a difficult time convincing her to appear on the cover of this magazine alone.

“I’ve always felt blessed to lead this program, but it’s not my program,” McGinnis said. “This program is Jacksonville State’s...it’s the Jacksonville State family’s. But more importantly, it’s

JSU Recognized as Top Producer of Fulbright Scholars

The U.S. Department of State’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs has named Jacksonville State University a top producing institution of Fulbright Scholars. One of the most prestigious awards in academia, the Fulbright Scholars program is the U.S. government’s flagship international educational exchange program.

JSU received more Fulbright awards in 2016-2017 than any other university in Alabama and was among the top producers in the nation, with the following three recipients:

Guillermo Francia – A computer science professor, Francia is a recipient of a Fulbright Cyber Security Award from the US-UK Fulbright Commission. He is in London, England, working with a group of prominent cyber security experts at Imperial College to perform research on critical infrastructure security. He is part of the first wave of American researchers traveling to the UK as part of the 2015 Obama-Cameron bilateral agreement to strengthen cyber security research collaboration between the United States and UK.

Russel Lemmons – A distinguished professor of history, Lemmons will travel to the Ludwig-Maximilian University of Munich in Germany over the next two springs to research the life of a Jesuit priest, Rupert Mayer, who opposed National Socialism. He plans to spend a great deal of time in the Jesuit archives and the Diocesan archives in Munich. The results of his research will be seen in a biography he is writing about Mayer.

Ellen Peck – An assistant professor of drama, Peck is both a theatre practitioner and a musical theatre historian specializing in the early 20th century. She is currently using her Fulbright award to teach classes in musical theatre and American theatre history at Alexandru Ioan Cuza University in Romania.

“JSU’s participation in the Fulbright Scholars program has enabled our faculty to experience international cultures, engage in scholarship with an expanded world view, teach in universities around the world, and bring those perspectives back to our campus,” said JSU Provost Rebecca Turner. “For a campus our size, located in a small town in rural Alabama, we are proud of our global citizenship emphasis and thank the Fulbright program for assisting us in fulfilling our mission.”

Since its inception in 1946, the Fulbright Program has provided more than 370,000 participants – chosen for their academic merit and leadership potential – with the opportunity to exchange ideas and contribute to finding solutions to shared international concerns. Over 1,100 U.S. college and university faculty and administrators, professionals, artists, journalists, scientists, lawyers and independent scholars are awarded Fulbright grants to teach and/or conduct research each year in over 125 countries throughout the world. 🌐

JSU Opens Center for Manufacturing Support

JSU has established a new Center for Manufacturing Support to expand opportunities for the university’s applied engineering students. Housed within the Department of Applied Engineering, the goal of the center is to marry research and education, enabling students to obtain meaningful, real-world experience while providing support to small businesses.

The center has already collaborated on several projects with regional businesses and corporations – from prototyping work for a small business in Birmingham to a 3D printing project for Gnutti Carlo to ongoing efforts with Honda Manufacturing of Alabama. The center is also actively working with other departments and units on campus, including rebuilding the ROTC rappelling tower.

“The experience students are receiving working with regional industries through the center has already begun to pay off for both the students and companies,” said Chris Marker, center manager. “The students are getting real-world experience and the companies are completing projects that would otherwise not be feasible.”

Marker said this serves as an early exposure to the job market for students, allowing them to learn alongside future employers. At the same time, the center benefits local industries by providing them access to a skilled labor force and assistance with projects.

The center is open year-round. For more information, contact Chris Marker at 256-782-5129 or cmarker@jsu.edu. 🌐 the kids who have come through this program, it belongs to them.”

Shying away from letting GEM write a feature about just her, McGinnis asked that we turn the spotlight back on her assistant coaches: Mark Wisener and Julie Boland.

Mark Wisener has been a member of McGinnis’ staff for 20-plus years and has emerged as one of the key components in making sure the engine remains in running capacity. Wisener, who played baseball at Snead State before transferring to JSU in the early ‘90s, has coached six conference Pitchers of the Year, including in 2016 when Whitney Gillespie won the award after posting a 16-4 record with a 1.13-earned run average, 18 complete games and two-no-hitters as a sophomore.

The other staple that holds the Jacksonville State softball program together is long-time assistant coach Julie Boland, who played under McGinnis and ranks in the top 10 on numerous lists in the program’s record books.

“When I first came on my recruiting visit and when she talked to me on the phone, I knew there was something real about her,” Boland said of Coach McGinnis. “There was no fakeness or her just trying to sell a school or make everything look shiny. She was just real. And when I met her in person, I felt the same thing.”

With McGinnis, Wisener and Boland all Jacksonville State graduates, it makes JSU one of only two out of 295 Division I softball programs – UCLA being the other – in which the entire full-time staff are serving at their alma mater. When asked what has kept the trio together through the decades, Wisener believes their “friendship” is the top thing.

“Jana lets Julie and I have a lot of say, because she really respects what we have to say,” he said. “Jana and I have worked together for, I guess, going on 22 years now and we’ve never had an argument about practice, games or what we need to do. We all just have a unique friendship and work relationship. There have been ‘bigger programs’ who have asked Julie and I come, but that’s just not home to us.”

The word “home” is defined several different ways: a place where one lives, a headquarters, a place where one is born. In the case of Jana McGinnis, Mark Wisener and Julie Boland, home is Jacksonville State. Home is the people who share the feeling of love and appreciation every time an Ella Denes jogs onto the playing surface of University Field knowing they’re about to give everything they have and more to represent the university.

To the community of Jacksonville as well as the players and families of Jacksonville State, this is and will always be home to Jana McGinnis. 🌐

Marching Southerners Carry Founders' Legacy Across the Pacific

By Buffy Lockette

Photography by Matt Reynolds

When the founding director of the JSU Marching Southerners, Dr. John T. Finley, was serving his country in the US Air Force during World War II, he never imagined that in a few short years he would establish a band program that would carry his legacy back across the Pacific six decades later.

Following a Veterans Day halftime show in 2015, the 60-year-old band was surprised with the news that it had been invited to perform at the 75th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor. This past December, more than half of the 500-member band, accompanied by over 100 alumni and friends, flew to Honolulu to take part in the historic event.

"I wanted to accept the invitation because I knew this particular performance had the potential to be life changing for our students – and it was," said Dr. Ken Bodiford, JSU director of bands.

This wasn't the first time the band has been asked to cross oceans to perform. It was invited to play for the Queen of England in London's 2012 New Year's Parade. In 1996, it marched in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade.

With more than a year to prepare, the Southerners' 2016 halftime show – "Heroes: Lost and Fallen" – was designed to honor the anniversary throughout marching season. Featuring patriotic hymns and popular tunes from the era, each show was dedicated in memory of those who lost their lives at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. During one poignant moment during the show, actors interpreted loving couples being separated by the war and, later, happily reunited – except for one whose spouse had made the ultimate sacrifice for his country.

In advance of the trip, Pearl Harbor veteran Durward Swanson met with the band to share his memories of the tragedy and prepare the students for their performance. It was a message clarinetist Rayne Ragains has heard her entire life. The great granddaughter of two War World II veterans had planned to sit out of the band her senior year, due to the demands of her final year in nursing school, but had a change of heart when she learned about the halftime show theme and the performance at Pearl Harbor.

"I talked it over with my parents and they told me what an honor it would be to be part of this," said Ragains, who cried throughout her Pearl Harbor performance. "I got to march the year and it changed my life – every year I have marched has changed my life, but this year

"I think that both
Dr. Finley and Dr. Walters would have been extremely proud of the band at the Pearl Harbor performance."

has been one of the biggest impacts on me and my family.”

The band flew to Honolulu on Dec. 9. It was originally asked to participate in a mass band performance at the national ceremony on Dec. 7 but, due to final exams, wasn't able to get to Hawaii until later in the week. Instead, it helped close the anniversary week on Sunday, Dec. 11, with a heartwarming performance on the dock of the USS Missouri overlooking the memorial for the USS Arizona. After spending the morning touring the site of the tragedy they had heard so much about over the past year, band members marched through the gates of the USS Missouri memorial and assembled along its dock.

A hush fell over the audience lined up along the deck of the ship when the signature sound of the Marching Southerners began to rise up from the dock below, drift across the peaceful harbor, and bounce off the volcanic remnants of the Ko'olau Range just like it has off Chimney Peak all these years since the war. It's a sound enriched by the Conn 20J tubas Dr. Finley ironically acquired as Navy surplus when he established the band – horns that continue to be repaired and reused since they're no longer manufactured.

This respect for tradition is ingrained in the culture of the Marching Southerners. It was passed down from Finley to Dr. David Walters, who took over as band director when Finley was promoted to head of the music department in 1961. Walters also served in World War II, stationed in the Pacific on the USS Dixie. Both men played in the military bands of their respective branches. Perhaps it was there they acquired the discipline that would be passed on to generations of Southerners.

Both Finley and Walters died within a few months of each other in 2015 and the loss has been felt deeply by their successor, Dr. Bodiford, who had led the band under their mentorship since 1994. In February, Bodiford announced that the 2017 halftime show will be “Angels Among Us,” focusing on those who “continue to inspire us, comfort us and give us hope” even when they are no longer with us.

“I think that both Dr. Finley and Dr. Walters would have been extremely proud of the band at the Pearl Harbor performance,” said Bodiford. “Each year, when a new freshman class enters the band, we discuss the history of the band and the importance of Dr. Finley and Dr. Walters. The Southerners’ pregame show includes their arrangements.”

And Finley and Walters will be on Bodiford’s mind during performances this fall, just as they were at Pearl Harbor. “Their legacy will never be forgotten,” he said. 🇺🇸

Deans Selected to Oversee Two New Schools

JSU has promoted two well-respected departmental leaders to serve as deans of the university’s new School of Science and School of Human Services and Social Sciences.

Dr. Timothy Lindblom, head of the Department of Biology, has been named dean of the School of Science while Dr. Maureen Newton, head of the Department of Sociology and Social Work, has been named dean of the School of Human Services and Social Sciences.

The university announced last June that it was reorganizing its four colleges into six schools to create more manageable, marketable and synergistic units. The large College of Arts and Sciences was split into three schools: the School of Arts and Humanities, the School of Science, and the School of Human Services and Social Sciences. The university needed to select new deans to oversee its two new schools.

“As JSU moves forward with its new academic structure with six schools, leadership is extremely important to our future success,” said President John M. Beehler. “I am very pleased that we have found two excellent leaders in Maureen Newton and Tim Lindblom to be our founding deans of the School of Human Services and Social Sciences and the School of Science. I am confident they are the right people at the right time to lead these two new academic schools to a bright future that is transformative, innovative and engaged for success.”

Merrill’s Makeover

Over the 2016-17 school year, four newly renovated classrooms opened for students and faculty to utilize and enjoy. These rooms were made possible by generous donations from Ronnie Smith, Noble Bank and Keith Mitchell.

Renovations began shortly before Spring Break 2016 and were completed during the summer. Not only did these rooms receive a physical facelift – with fresh paint, new flooring and furniture – but they were also equipped with new technology, such as televisions and Smartboards, to enhance the classroom experience for both students and faculty members.

“The classroom upgrades feature modern technology and comfortable furniture that help our students as they prepare for a career,” said Bill Nash, JSU development officer for major gifts. “Great facilities help us attract great students. We are fortunate to have donors who see the value of investing in our students to help the School of Business and Industry reach its objectives.”

JSU is grateful for the generous donations provided to make this possible for students. If you are interested in giving back to JSU, please contact the Office of Institutional Development at 256-782-5605 or visit www.jsu.edu/giving/.

MARCH MADNESS HITS JSU

March Madness broke out on campus this spring when the Jacksonville State men’s basketball team earned its first Ohio Valley Conference Championship title and made its first trip to the NCAA Tournament. JSU is the first athletic program to win both the OVC Football Championship and OVC Men’s Basketball Championship in the same academic year since Murray State accomplished the feat in 1996-97.

The Gamecocks took part in the “Big Dance” – the NCAA Tournament – on March 17, facing off against the No. 2 Louisville Cardinals in the first round of playoffs. Although luck wasn’t on the Gamecocks side during the St. Patrick’s Day matchup, the national stage was not too big for the No. 15 seed team in its first appearance in the NCAA Tournament. The Gamecocks' led for much of the first half before Louisville’s relentless pressure began to take its toll and the Cardinals claimed a 78-63 win. First-year JSU coach Ray Harper couldn’t fault the effort from his squad.

“I think the entire country got an opportunity to see how hard our guys play,” Harper said in the post-game news conference. “I think we represented our university, our city and the OVC in a class manner, which we said we would. The bar’s been set. Hopefully, we can do it again someday soon.”

KNOW ONE ANOTHER, LOVE ONE ANOTHER:

international program celebrates 70 years

By Buffy Lockette

At the end of World War II in 1945, the United Nations was formed to foster international cooperation and prevent future conflicts. Only a year later, in Alabama, a similar organization was established on the campus known today as Jacksonville State University.

Dr. James H. Jones and his wife, Myra Hume Jones, had traveled to Europe and were heartbroken by the destruction and devastation the two world wars left behind. Having spent time in France while Dr. Jones studied for his doctorate, the two believed they could make a difference in world affairs by inviting French students to study in Jacksonville, Ala., where Dr. Jones served as a language professor.

"My mother and father thought we had had enough wars and that if people got to know each other better, they would get tired of fighting," said son William

Jones, explaining how the program's motto became "Know one another and you will love one another."

In 1946, the JSU International House and Program was born. What began as an Alabama-Paris cultural exchange program grew over the next decade to include students from nearly every continent. Dr. Jones served as director for 18 years, assisted by Mrs. Jones. Their son William was 15 years old when the program was established and, now in his 80s, he looks back on it as the highlight of his parent's lives.

"They thought about these people as their children," said William Jones '53. "My mother always kept the door open. They referred to my mother as 'Momma Jones' and to my father as 'Doctor Jones'."

John R. Stewart, Jr. '74 shares similar stories about his family. His father, Dr.

John R. Stewart, Sr., led the program from Dr. Jones' retirement in 1963 until 1985. Stewart was 11 when his parents became the new "father and mother" of the international program. Mrs. Trudy Stewart also taught Instructional Media 101 – a course on using the library – at the university.

"My parents lived and breathed the International House for 22 years," said Stewart. "That was all that was ever discussed at the supper table at home. When the foreign kids got sick, my parents spent as much time at the hospital with them as they ever did with me. And yeah, it was all family."

The university constructed a new home for the program, the International House located at the intersection of Highways 21 and 204, the year of Jones' retirement. Stewart remembers helping assemble the beds and move in the first group of students in the house in 1964. When two students arrived weeks early – Gordon from Australia and Franz from Austria – Stewart and his brother had to make room for their new international siblings until the International House opened on Labor Day.

"Gordon brought his guitar, and he could sing 'Waltzing Matilda,'" Stewart said. "We got out in the backyard with pine trees and tried throwing a boomerang. You cannot throw a boomerang in Alabama. It will not come back."

It was this warm, family-like environment that welcomed Jeffrey Smyth when he arrived on campus in 1958 from England. While studying at JSU for a year before returning home to Cambridge University, Smyth befriended a Japanese student named Tomiko. They stayed in touch and married a few years later after returning to their home countries. Today, they live in Canada.

"For Tomiko and me, living in an international student community prepared us for the rest of our lives," said Smyth. "We live easily and comfortably in the world's most multicultural large city, Toronto, where almost half the residents – including us – were not born in Canada."

The Smyths recently returned to campus for the 70th anniversary celebration of the JSU international program, held over Homecoming Weekend at Houston Cole Library. More than 150 alumni traveled from across the globe to reunite with old friends and share memories from the International House. JSU President John M. Beehler addressed the crowd.

"You really can't get things done anymore without thinking about the international ramifications," Beehler told the audience. "We want to make sure our students are able to function globally. It is important that we continue the tradition of the International House, but we need to work to internationalize all 8,000-plus JSU students. We want to transform our students into educated, ethical professionals – and to do that they are going to have to be globally connected."

There are typically 20 international and 20 American students living in the International House. The experience of living with others from around the world proves to be life changing for the American residents and international students alike.

Dalene Cunningham Decker ('86), now a Georgia elementary teacher, had met few people from outside the United States before moving into the house and having roommates from Denmark, Thailand and Costa Rica from 1983 to 1986. "It was like a family living in the house together," she said. Kent Anderson ('72), a Tennessee attorney, had a roommate from Vietnam in the 1960s and the two became great friends despite conflicts between their countries.

Current JSU student Mason Battles from Gadsden, Ala., said, "I came in as an outsider and moved in with a roommate from Jordan. I think, as Americans, we have pre-dispositions but once you know people that changes."

Years pass, the world turns, and allies change. Still, 70 years later, Dr. Jones' motto continues to ring true: "Know One Another and You Will Love One Another."

BEHIND THE WHEALE:

JSU Graduate Takes on Law and Hollywood

By Heather Greene

At first glance, the office of Laura Lundy-Wheale ('10) might seem like that of any other Atlanta lawyer. Her husband Patrick, also an attorney, holds the office adjacent to hers, and George, their beagle, has the difficult task of greeting clients. Yet, Wheale lives somewhat of a double life. When she's not working on a case for a client, she can be found on film sets with some of Hollywood's biggest names pursuing her other passion – acting.

Despite her full-time job, Wheale has plunged into the film world, landing

As the film is set in Texas but filmed in Locust Grove, Ga., Wheale’s authentic Southern accent helped her easily glide into this role, and the on-set voice coach, who also did the voice coaching for “Titanic,” helped her and others appropriately add in that Texas twang to their lines. In the film industry, where Southern accents are often learned, Wheale’s dialect is rich with authentic Southern charm.

“A lot of people like the accent because it is very different,” said Wheale “On the flip side of that, I’ve been told multiple times ‘you need to learn how to neutralize it.’ I guess that’s something I’m working on, but I also feel like it’s something that makes me who I am.”

Soon after, she was cast as a reporter in the Academy Award-nominated film, “Sully,” directed by Clint Eastwood and starring Tom Hanks.

“I got to meet him in hair and makeup actually,” Wheale said about meeting Hanks for the first time. “He came over and introduced himself to me...It was one of those things like, ‘I know who you are. You’re Tom Hanks.’”

Originally from Cedertown, Ga., Wheale grew up in a family that believed in exposing their four children to various fields of study, the arts, and hobbies so they could discover their own talents. At the age of 12, Wheale was introduced to acting at the Alliance Theatre in Midtown, and she forever fell in love with the stage. Seeing her passion for acting and knowing there was no community theatre in Cedartown, her parents, JSU graduates Bill and Catharine Lundy, started a children’s community theatre, which hosted productions each summer as Wheale grew up.

Another one of Wheale’s many talents that she discovered as a child was tennis, and when she finished high school in 2006, she accepted a tennis scholarship at JSU.

“It’s a tradition in our family to go to Jacksonville State,” Wheale said, reflecting on her family tree comprised of multiple Gamecocks.

Juggling tennis practices and matches, drama rehearsals, studying, and Phi Mu involvement, her “renaissance” lifestyle carried over into her college years. She laughs recalling a time when she was so exhausted from her hectic routine that she fell asleep in the corner of the Black Box in the Stone Center during a rehearsal. However, she expresses how appreciative she was that JSU was willing to work with her on her demanding schedule, explaining she “found that everyone was very friendly and supportive.”

Wheale holds fond memories of JSU and to prospective students says, “You gotta go there, especially if you’re wanting to have the experience where you are going to be able to go walk across campus and see at least three people you know. Coming from a small town, that’s what I like.”

Upon graduating from JSU in 2010 with a bachelor’s degree in theatre and a minor in English, she continued to follow in her father’s footsteps by entering Cumberland School of Law. For her, choosing to study law was also a conscious decision of working towards gaining access through doors that are sometimes difficult to open in the film world.

During the first two years of law school, Wheale found herself taking a step back from acting for no apparent reason, but feeling the void that left in her life, she knew that had to change. So during the summers of 2012 and 2013, she enrolled in the Lee Strasberg Theatre and Film Institute in Los Angeles, selected based upon the fact that her favorite JSU drama professor, Susan McCain, had trained there with Lee Strasberg.

This unlocked the door to the film industry and became Wheale’s first introduction into acting on film. “It was just opening up another world that, I think, I was just intimidated by,” explained Wheale.

Now, that intimidation seems to have subsided, having two huge film credits on her resume.

“I’ve been very spoiled with both those movies, having worked with such directors because it was such a pleasant experience,” Wheale said.

Wheale’s love of theatre even played a role in her marriage engagement. Her husband, Patrick – who she met in law school – proposed to her on stage at the Cedartown Theatre after a production of “Into the Woods.” The day the couple said “I Do” in 2013, JSU was represented.

“I invited all of my tennis teammates to my wedding,” she said. “Each lived all over the world but found a way to Cedartown to attend my wedding. Through our relationships built at JSU, we are all forever bonded. I can’t think of a better way to capture the bond that JSU encompasses for me.”

After tying the knot and passing the bar, the couple joined Childers, Schlueter & Smith, LLC in Atlanta, which is conveniently also a growing area for the film industry today. When not practicing law or on a set, Wheale can be found attending live performances, watching movies, or bouldering.

From small-town shows each summer in her hometown to the JSU Stone Center stage to working with directors Clint Eastwood and Ang Lee, Wheale has worked to strategically be where she is in her career. While tight-lipped about her future plans, audiences can bet that this will not be the last time we see Wheale on the silver screen. 🌀

“You gotta go there, especially if you’re wanting to have the experience where you are going to be able to go walk across campus and see at least three people you know. Coming from a small town, that’s what I like.”

JSU Launches Transfer Pathway Program

JSU is excited to announce the launch of the Transfer Pathway Program, a new initiative that will benefit all community college students in Alabama and other states.

The goal of the Transfer Pathway Program is to significantly increase the transferability of students from community colleges throughout the state of Alabama, regionally, and nationally. The pathway model allows students to enroll in specific courses at the community college level that will better prepare them for the major they wish to pursue at JSU. The program addresses recruitment and retention of college bound students. The initiative will operate as a parallel option, not a substitution, and this will not conflict with the Alabama state-wide articulation agreement.

A pilot version of the program is slated to begin this summer at Gadsden State Community College (GSCC). Faculty members at JSU and GSCC have collaborated to develop five pathway programs that will serve as the pilot experience at GSCC.

Dr. Jean M. Pugliese, executive director of the Transfer Pathway Program, stated, "JSU wishes to recruit high quality students from community colleges, and more importantly, JSU wants these students to have a positive experience as they progress and eventually graduate from JSU. We plan on having events that cater to the potential transfer student population."

JSU's Alumni Relations Office has also joined forces with the Transfer Pathway Program to promote its implementation and create interest among potential students in the communities where alumni live and work.

For more information about this program, please contact Dr. Jean Pugliese at pugliese@jsu.edu.

Alumni Volunteers Needed

Hopefully by now you have heard about President Beehler's "Alumni Boots on the Ground" initiative to utilize our alumni to help JSU's enrollment and retention efforts. We would like to ask for volunteers to serve as our Boots on the Ground. If you are interested in any of the following opportunities, please contact Kaci Ogle, Director of Alumni Relations, at kogle@jsu.edu or 256-782-5405.

- Serve as a JSU representative at college recruitment fairs in your local area
- Host an alumni/prospective student dinner or reception in your area

- Bring a student over for a campus visit or set up a visit with JSU for the student
- Represent JSU at your local high school or community college awards program to present scholarships to future Gamecocks
- Serve as a mentor for current JSU students through the online mentoring program (sign up at jsu-csm.symplicity.com/mentors/)
- Participate in an alumni career panel on campus for our students

Annual Fund Board Seeks Support

By Linda Lehtomaa

When Phil Purcell agreed to assume the chairmanship of the newly reactivated Annual Fund board, he knew it would be challenging and also one of the most rewarding opportunities of his career.

Purcell graduated from JSU in 1970 with a degree in business and a minor in accounting. He credits hard work and the excellent education he received at JSU for a successful career in sales and marketing of information technology solutions. Newly retired, he decided that now is the time to give back to his alma mater.

"I want to ensure that Jacksonville State University students for years to come will have state-of-the-art classroom and laboratory facilities, cutting-edge technology, outstanding programs and faculty, and scholarship funding, to name just a few of the elements critical to educating the workforce of tomorrow," Purcell said.

He added, "Business and government require competent, professional employees who can think critically, solve problems, and collaborate in a team setting to meet the challenges of a global community. It will require enhanced funding for JSU to ensure that its graduates are ready for these challenges."

"We will also be seeking dollars for extracurricular activities such as athletics, on-campus clubs, and the Marching Southerners, which are vital in providing special university experiences for students," Purcell said.

"We have assembled a stellar Annual Fund board whose members represent a cross-section of business, government and the community at large. They have each made a personal commitment to the university and look forward to helping tell the Jacksonville State University story to others," he said.

The Annual Fund board plans to ask alumni, those who benefitted from their educational experiences at the university, to invest in their alma mater when help is most needed. In addition, it is their hope that business partners who ultimately hire JSU students and vendors who work with the university on a daily basis will join in the endeavor to strengthen JSU's future.

According to Purcell, "We seek to make the Annual Fund board's relationship with donors a win-win for everyone. It is our promise to create a culture of success, communicate clearly the university's needs, establish trust in the Annual Fund, and maintain that trust with positive actions and continuous communications."

The Annual Fund board, working in concert with JSU President John M. Beehler and the Office of Development, seeks to add revenue that has been cut from state allocations and help to slow the tuition hikes that have been required to meet the JSU budget.

According to President Beehler, "Make no mistake, Jacksonville State is an outstanding university and it is our goal to ensure that educational excellence will continue to be a hallmark of the JSU experience. The ultimate objective is that our graduates continue to be successful for decades to come."

"I want to thank the prestigious individuals who have stepped forward to join the Annual Fund board and work with us to continue on the path to greatness for JSU," President Beehler added.
